Carter, Ford To Debate Three Times

Arrangements were completed Wednesday for a series of three television debates between President Ford and Jimmy Carter, the first such direct presidential campaign debates since John F. Kennedy faced Richard M. Nixon in 1960.

"I believe the American people will be the winners," Ford said when asked if the thought he would be the winner over his Democratic challenger.

"I think the important thing is that the American people have the chance to evaluate us," Carter said. "I think I can hold my own," he added.

Ford, speaking at a news conference on the White House lawn, said the debates would provide voters with "an honest picture" of the candidates. "I am enthusiastic," he said, adding he has always been eager to confront Carter — "and the sooner

Carter said he is completely satisfied with the sharp a comparison as I can between President Ford and myself and our ability to lead this country," he said.

-Ford was sharply critical of several of his Democratic opponent's positions on defense matters - a field the Republican president considers his strong suit and had wanted to debate

-Carter made public his 1975 income tax returns, showing he used two legitimate techniques to reduce his taxes to $17,484.14 on a total income of $136,138.92. By contrast, President Ford paid $94,568.93 in federal taxes on 1975 gross income of $251,991,24.

Instead of debating defense first, Carter and Ford will argue domestic and economic issues in their first television meeting Sept. 23. A second debate, also under the sponsorship of the League of Women Voters, will be held on foreign policy and defense matters. A third and final session will be open to any issues. Dates for the last two were not set immediately.

The first debate will be 90 minutes long, but the length of the other debates was not known.

Representatives for both political camps and the mate, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, will meet in one debate.

When negotiators for both sides and the League met in Washington, the topics and the timing were apparently subjects of bargaining with Ford seeking to open the debates on defense issues and Carter wanting to open up over the issue of presidential leadership.

Ford's criticism of Carter's defense positions was made in a much-applauded speech to the National Guard Association in Washington. The Republican President particularly criticized Carter's advocacy of a gradual withdrawal of troops from Korea, saying: "We cannot lay down our arms in the simple hope that others will follow our lead."

Ford said that "there are those in this political vear who want to withdraw our troops from their positions overseas . . . We cannot retreat from the front lines of freedom if we are to preserve our freedom here at home.'

House officials later said he was referring to Carter's proposal last month to withdraw most U.S. troops in South Korea over a four- or five-year period

Gov. J. James Exon Wednesday charged that two _ttorneys have a financial interest in attacking Nebraska State Patrol anti-drug trafficking operations.

The governor acknowledged some inevitable abuses but staunchly defended the patrol's methods, criticized Monday before the Legislature's Judiciary Committee by attorneys Kirk E. Naylor Jr. and Dennis R. Keefe.

The Lincoln law partners submitted a 194-page report alleging fraudulent use and lack of controls on state-provided drug "buy money" by convicted felons who took advantage of their roles to violate drug laws.

"If we are going to allow two prominent attorneys who specialize and have a major portion of their livelihood in protecting the accused criminals" and in "defending those accused of violating Nebraska statutes on drugs," and "if they are going to be dictating how investigations are going to be conducted," Exon said, that's "not in the interests of stamping out illegal drug traffic as best we can.

"On the other hand." he added, "I insist that the law be followed in all instances." Exon made the statements in an interview with The Lincoln Star, after he met with Patrol Supt. Col. C. P. Karthauser Tuesday and again Wednesday.

Exon said Karthauser and other patrol officials "gave me a on (their) a attempting to nail down these drug pushers," and which the two attorneys suggested be reformed.

Exon said he recommended the patrol "ask for an immediate appearance before the Judiciary Committee, to tell the story of the over-all good job that the patrol has done in efforts to curtail drug traffic and to imprison" those lawbreakers. Karthauser that request.

It's proper and important to allow the patrol a formal opportunity to answer charges in the attorneys' report, Exon said, noting no patrol representative attended the public hearing Monday because no invitation was issued.

The governor broadened his criticism beyond the attorneys: Few if any critical questions were asked by the members of the Judiciary Committee. If anything, we need stronger prosecution and enforcement of the drug laws within the (limits of the) law, rather than any

However, "I told the patrol the only part of what I could agree with" among the Naylor-Keefe report recommendations was that case prosecutors should be under the state attorney

Exon explained he vetoed the bill allowing the patrol prosecuting attorneys because he felt that while the patrol did need its own attorneys. "prosecutors who appear in court should be under the attorney general." The Legislature overrode his veto.

"Most of the cases that have been discussed in hearings before the Judiciary Committee have not involved the patrol or their prosecutors." Exon said decisions on evidence and called witnesses weren't made by the patrol but by local attorneys, who I think have done generally a good job."

Patrol officials "have told me they do have controls on the 'buy Exon said. "They do money," have cases where they may have been taken advantage of in some instances." he admitted.

But the governor pointed out "that at all levels of enforcement and investigation in the U.S., there is widely used the contacts with former convicted felons as informers, to help those conducting investigations with information that just cannot be obtained

He said the State Supreme Court "decided correctly, in my opinion, that a convicted felon, while he might not be the best witness in the world," can have his court testimony considered as long as his record is known. Exon favored use of corroborating evidence.

"When dealing with those who have broken the law in the past, it's not surprising in a few instances you might find such individuals accomplishing or doing things that should not be done.

"That does not mean the State Patrol does condone such activities," Exon said.

New reports haven't brought out yet "that the State Patrol uses extensively lie detector tests on the individuals they have used as informants," Exon said. Further, "I have never seen these two complaining attorneys identified as being criminal defense attorneys for those accused of violating the drug laws." And the state senators didn't question paid informers "as to what interests they have in this whole area," he said.

Finally, he pointed out, "there's been a locking together of 'undercover agents' with convicted felons," who aren't regular patrol employes.

"They are a very necessary evil," the governor said.

"If we ever go so far in the state of Nebraska as to (prohibit) not only the patrol but all of the law enforcement and other investigative agencies from using informers in drug cases, that's not the protection" needed for citizens and youth, Exon said.

"That would be a very significant triumph for those who make a good livelihood for the defense of those accused of violating our drug laws." Exon repeated his counter-theme.

Col. Karthauser said later the patrol will continue using felons and informants, unless the Legislature makes new law to the contrary.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wayne L. Hays, the once powerful House chairman who was toppled by a Capitol Hill sex scandal, resigned from Congress Wednesday, effective immediately.

"I think he did it to save his family," House Speaker Carl Albert said. The inquiry was on the charge by Elizabeth Ray that Hays kept her on his House Administration Committee payroll only to be his mistress. The charges forced Hays to resign as head of the Democratic Campaign Committee, quit as committee chairman and then to announce he would not seek reelection to Congress.

Hays himself asked for the Ethics Committee inquiry saying it would exonerate him by establishing that Miss Ray did committee work for her $14,000-a-year

But Hays said when he dropped his reelection campaign three weeks ago that one reason was "I don't want to give that woman a chance to make another straightening patients' eyes the way orthodontists brace teeth, but not all doctors see eye to eye on the controversial new procedure.

The technique, called orthokeratology, involves treatment with a series of special pressureinducing contact lenses designed to gradually reshape the eye.

Some doctors are calling it preventive medicine. Others are worried the treatment could be permanently harmful and only temporarily

'Historically, we've always had to wait for a problem to develop and then do what we could to alleviate it," said Dr. Stuart A. Grant, the Los Angeles optometrist who helped develop the special lens. "But now we have an actual preventative. If we can stop problems before they develop, people won't have either the expense or the trouble later.'

Orthokeratology is designed to help persons with refractive problems - near-sightedness, farsightedness or astigmatism. Grant estimated that most of the 100 million persons in the United States who wear glasses fall into these categories.

In orthokeratology, a person wears a succession of graduated contact lenses, each one pressing the cornea a bit more toward its proper curvature. The eyes are rechecked every six weeks and new lenses are prescribed as the curve improves.

The treatment normally last two years and costs about $1,200, he said. Grant said the technique can benefit nearly everyone with a refractive problem. "The only question," he said. "is to what degree we can help. That depends on how bad a person's eyes are when he comes in for treatment.'

Dolores Walsh, administrative director of professional services for the Jules Stein Eye Institute at UCLA, said orthokeratology is not recommended "because it may prove harmful and is not permanent."

Dr. Jerome Pearlman, an associate professor of ophthalmology at the center, added, "The physiology is unsound because once you remove the lens, the cornea will revert to the same shape it was before. Optometrists think it is perfectly safe but when people run into trouble they come to us (ophthalmologists)."

Orthokeratologists disagree. They cite several successful cases, including:

-A 6-year-old girl who had been entered in a Braille class because her vision was deteriorating 50 per cent every three months. Now, at age 15, she has 20-20 vision.

-A New York City policeman suspended because he lied about his 20-200 vision. After six months of treatment, his sight has improved to 20-40, good enough to qualify for a neighboring police force.

--- A woman in her late 20s who had 20-500 vision in both eyes. Her sight improved to 20-50 after a year's treatment.

An estimated 10,000 persons have been treated by the technique since 1960. But only in the last few years has the technique become widespread.

Grant said the technique was discovered accidentally, while fitting a patient with regular contact lenses. Tests showed some patients' eyes improved, but it was unpredictable.

"We decided that controlling this change would benefit the patient more than just letting it

'Gasoline Tree' Real Possibility

San Francisco (UPI) - A fuel for cars and trucks indefinitely.

The rubber tree, Calvin said, produces hydrocarbon directly with an efficiency almost as great as sugar cane for making carbohydrate. Rubber, however. has a high molecular weight, causing it to coagulate and become solid.

"If we could decipher that mechanism and control it so that we might create a smaller hydrocarbon molecule, we might be able to generate a gasoline tree," Calvin told his fellow

The Dayton public schools prepared to begin Ohio's first court-ordered, racialdesegregation busing program on a staggered basis Thursday. School officials in the city of a quarter-million persons said they expect no boycott and no trouble.

But Police Chief John Nevin said there were no reports of any trouble, all buses ran normally and School Supt. Ernest Grayson said, "It's almost like any normal year.

'Attendance is way up,'' Grayson said. "For the opening day, it is 1,000% better than last year. The students do not seem as tense.'

Some school officials said the boycott planned for this week may have been broken. But they were wary of further protests and mindful that most of last year's violent protests came several days after school opened.

"We have to be ready for this weekend," Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane said.

Last fall full-scale rioting erupted, scores of policemen were injured, the National Guard was called out and 638 and six arrests - would spread arrests were made in antibusing federal judge on Wednesday temporarily blocked government regulations which permit food processors to add bone bits and simmered fat to meat products, including hot dogs, canned beef stew and lunch meats.

U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant issued a temporary restraining order against the Agriculture Department rules, first issued last spring and contested by consumer organizations.

At issue were two food industry practices designed to use more of each livestock carcass in

In one, called mechanical deboning, bones with meat scraps attached are ground up and pushed through a sieve. Larger pieces of bone are screened out, but smaller particles remain within the meat which goes to consumers.

In the second, fat is slowly melted at relatively low temperatures - below 120 degrees. The liquid is poured off and the residue is then included as an ingredient in frozen pizza, corned beef, beef patties and

The second year of court-ordered school busing in the Louisville area opened quietly Wednesday. Officials said attendance was up sharply from a year ago despite antibusing protesters' calls for a class boycott.

The calm beginning of the school year in Louisville and Jefferson County schools was almost like a run-of-the-mili firstday of school in any city across the nation.

But Police Chief John Nevin said there were no reports of any trouble, all buses ran normally and School Supt. Ernest Grayson said, "It's almost like any normal year.'

"Attendance is way up," Grayson said. "For the opening day, it is 1,000% better than last year. The students do not seem as tense."

Some school officials said the boycott planned for this week may have been broken. But they were wary of further protests and mindful that most of last year's violent protests came several days after school opened.

"We have to be ready for this weekend," Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane said.

An Emotional Issue

The reduction in the number of Lincoln firefighters ordered by the City Council for economy reasons is the kind of emotional issue which breeds rumor and Firefighters say the reduction will mean less firemen per rig in certain situations and that the department's effectiveness thus could be undercut. Morale is said to be low because of the layoffs.

There are strong arguments on both sides of the issue. All Lincoln residents hope that the department's ability to perform its job is not hampered by the reduction of personnel.

We think it was a good-faith judgment on the part of budget-makers, however, not a careless budget cut made for publicity

One other development deserves mention. The firefighters association apparently is planning a "what if you had a fire and nobody came" media campaign with ads, news releases and bumper stickers to emphasize its position on the personnel

That kind of campaign might do nothing more than (pardon the expression) inflame passions and generate fear among Lincolnites who did not have access to the information upon which the budget-makers based their decision.

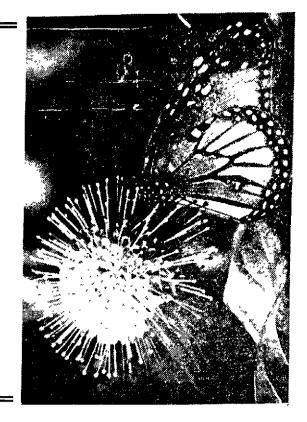

We hope that in their zeal to protect jobs, the firefighters can keep from overstating their case.

PSC Accountability Questioned

The Citizens' lobby, Common Cause, says the Nebraska Public Service Commission (PSC) is among 31 state regulatory agencies failing to meet public accountability standards.

Common Cause's main complaints are directed at a lack of a prohibition against regulators subsequently being employed by the utilities they regulate — a condition which is ripe for conflicts of interest - and at a lack of lobbying disclosure provisions. Those who appear before the PSC in rate and service cases are not required by law to list what they spend in trying to influence PSC decisions. Nor are commissioners required to report what is spent on them.

There was no indication that the Common Cause report on the public accountability of regulatory agencies was taking issue with the Nebraska agency's fidelity to open meetings standards. From that standpoint, the PSC is clean. The commission is open, however hostile some members may be to the media. The feeling that the media are enemies can affect the quality of openness, on reflection.

But it is in the area of possible interest conflicts and lobbying disclosure that Com-

We think the criticisms are legitimate. The public needs to know how much is spent, where it is spent — and on whom in influencing the shaping of public policy, in making laws, and in setting rates and service standards and rates of return. The public needs to know who is spending the

And there should be restrictions on the intermarriage of regulators and regulated

If there have not been specific instances of Nebraska regulatory officials taking fat jobs in industries they once regulated -as happens at the federal level

That is just what the PSC does not need. It already suffers from an image of being overly friendly with regulated industry — for good reason.

Common Cause pinpointed some cases of regulatory commissioners in other states accepting favors from regulated industry.

Some of those cases have found parallels in Nebraska and it has not done

Kissinger's Record of Shuttle Diplomacy

BY C. L. SULZBERGER

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who surely knows more about the subject than anyone else, believes it would be both wiser and more efficient for the U.S. government to have two cabinet officers jointly charged with supervision of the president's foreign policy.

Several times in the past I have written of this idea, which was originally pondered by Harry Truman, although he never initiated any action on it. The proposal is that the secretary of state should continue his function as No. 1 in the cabinet, keeper of the Great Seal and co-ordinator of policy abroad as well as related consultations with Congress.

At the same time, however, it is suggested that there should be a secretary for foreign affairs, of similar full cabinet rank, who would travel overseas for high-level negotiations and international conferences. Recently I asked Jimmy Carter for his opinion of this. He opposed it and thought a strong chief executive could operate effectively with a strong secretary of

PEKING . . . with Chinese Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-

However, when I subsequently put the question to Kissinger here he replied: "You can quote me as saying I am sympathetic to the idea." And why not? Kissinger has traveled more than any American official during our two centuries of national history. He has discovered, at the cost of enormous effort and much fatigue, that it is not only difficult to run affairs of "state" while flitting between continents trying to put out fires. Moreover, it is impossible to be in two places at once - even if the secretary were given a supersonic Concorde.

Whether Kissinger is finished with his public career, as most people assume, depends first of all on the elections; for Carter would no more want him as secretary of state in a Democratic administration than Kissinger would covet the job. And if Ford confounds the political soothsayers and remains in the White House, it is improbable the present secretary would re-

Obviously it is most taxing to be on a flying trapeze for eight years, especially while dodging brickbats. No doubt Kissinger would prefer to start another and private career. On the other hand, were a re-elected President Ford to urge that he remain in "the national interest" it would be hard for him to close the door on such a possibility.

One thing is certain; he will stay in office until the January inauguration and would never dream of resigning during the campaign. He managed to keep his cool both when Ford officially censored use of the word "detente" for the last six months (although continuing to pursue that policy) and when the President accepted a Ronald Reagan plank seeking to wound Ford, during the Republican convention, rather than risk losing the nomination. As far as I can ascertain, foreign policy architects of both parties regard platform planks that deal with this subject as neither binding nor of great consequence. Few major differences concerning U.S. goals appear among currently leading contenders to succeed Kissinger: George Ball, Cyrus Vance and Zbigmew Brezezziski among Democrats; Nelson Rockefeller, John Connally, Elbot Richardson and George Bush among Republicans.

* * * But even if Kissinger returns to private life next year, be must continue the immensely active pace he has set himself until his actual departure. After Nov 2 certain diplomatic issues, temporarily paralyzed by the election campaign, will revive Panama Canal negotiations. SALT talks, Middle East explorations, regularization of relations with Pelung í

Moreover, the present secretary of state is undertaking more 1976 voyages of discovery. The first is another meeting with South Africa's Prime Minister Vorster in Zurich, then conceivably a subsequent trip to Southern Africa; the second might be a quick flight to Manila to consult Philip President Marcos, should U.S. base negotiations there run into serious trou-

Thus, whatever happens, Kissinger is likely to remain airborne as well as in the thick of things during the rest of 1976. And, on the whole, his closest associate looks back over the past eight years and sees the period as one of successful diplomacy. Middle East, China, SALT and despite ups and downs, good present relations with Japanese and West European leaders

The most glaring failure has been on Greece and Turkey, the entire domain of Aegean affairs. That problem is bound to remain thorny for the next secretary of state -- even if by some remote chance, he should happen to be named Klaninger.

By MARQUIS CHILDS

Henry Kissinger described it as the most searing experience in his entire Talking in this despairing mood, he said he was well aware of the fate of other secretaries of state in a time of troubles. Dean Acheson had been vilified in a shameful way. But throughout his ordeal Acheson had had the support of the Democratic Party and, of course, the unswerving support of his President, Harry Truman.

Yet nevertheless Kissinger indicated that should Ford be elected, he would be willing to stay on for a brief time, perhaps four to six months. His enemies will promptly put this down to his ego. But the secretary has a strong feeling about continuity in foreign policy and certain cloudy areas which he hopes to be able to clear up.

One is Africa. He is contemplating another visit to Africa south of the Sahara before the election, although the time is not yet fixed nor the trip a

Both in Rhodesia and South Africa, blacks in revolt have put the white minority in increasing jeopardy.

Most important of all is SALT. Kissinger has all along said it would be impossible in an election year to get a SALT II agreement covering offensive nuclear weapons. Yet in October, 1977, the interim standstill agreement on offensive missiles expires and the way is open to an unlimited arms race.

Kissinger is probably more familiar with the intricacies of the SALT negotiations than any other American. He considers the 1977 deadline a fateful turning point. If by that time no agreement has been reached, the hopes for the future are bleak indeed. President Ford's boast that the world is at peace surely owes not a little to Secretary Kissinger

His negotiation of the Egyptian-Israeli agreement in the Sinai was a remarkable feat of diplomacy calling for perseverance and ingenuity in extraordinary degree. That shuttle diplomacy between Cairo and Jerusalem has seldom been matched.

Add to this his continuing friendship with and belief in Syria's President Hafez Assad. That card, thanks in part to the accident of the grim civil war in Lebanon, has paid off handsomely. The suggestion that the Golan Heights would be open to passage between the two sides would have seemed incredible a short time ago.

The Israelis have initiated a policy of allowing limited numbers of Lebanese to cross the border for medical treatment and the purchase of supplies. Opening up what has been a border sealed by electrified defense and every other security device can mean the beginning of a new era, however tentative, between Israel and her Arab neighbors.

 $\Rightarrow \Rightarrow \Rightarrow$

Kissinger is wise enough to know that incidents quite beyond his initiative or control have had a lot to do with the fact of peace. But it is a fact that the party in power takes credit for everything from good crop weather to the eradication of the boil weavil. And whatever the successes or defeats, Kissinger has been the principal architect of American foreign policy since

The continuity of policy in the years ahead is a principal concern of the secretary as he returns from the bruising experience of Kaussas City. Can the world stand still until the United States settles its internal differences? That is a question particularly acute to America's allies in Europe.

This year he says he will sow the wheat when the time arrives, rain or no rain. It isn't advisable to try and outguess the weather, especially hoping for rain during a drought.

PSC Accountability Questioned

The Citizens' lobby, Common Cause, says the Nebraska Public Service Commission (PSC) is among 31 state regulatory agencies failing to meet public accountability standards.

Common Cause's main complaints are directed at a lack of a prohibition against regulators subsequently being employed by the utilities they regulate — a condition which is ripe for conflicts of interest — and at a lack of lobbying disclosure provisions. Those who appear before the PSC in rate and service cases are not required by law to list what they spend in trying to influence PSC decisions. Nor are commissioners required to report what is spent on them.

There was no indication that the Common Cause report on the public accountability of regulatory agencies was taking issue with the Nebraska agency's fidelity to open meetings standards. From that standpoint, the PSC is clean. The commission is open, however hostile some members may be to the media. The feeling that the media are enemies can affect the quality of openness, on reflection.

But it is in the area of possible interest conflicts and lobbying disclosure that Common Cause finds fault with Nebraska's most important regulatory body.

We think the criticisms are legitimate.

The public needs to know how much is spent, where it is spent - and on whom in influencing the shaping of public policy, in making laws, and in setting rates and service standards and rates of return. The public needs to know who is spending the

And there should be restrictions on the intermarriage of regulators and regulated

If there have not been specific instances of Nebraska regulatory officials taking fat jobs in industries they once regulated -as happens at the federal level

- there is still the opportunity for conflict.

That is just what the PSC does not need. It already suffers from an image of being overly friendly with regulated industry - for good reason.

Common Cause pinpointed some cases of regulatory commissioners in other states accepting favors from regulated industry.

Some of those cases have found parallels in Nebraska and it has not done much for public confidence in government.

Kissinger's Record of Shuttle Diplomacy

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who surely knows more about the subject than anyone else, believes it would be both wiser and more efficient for the U.S. government to have two cabinet officers jointly charged with supervision of the president's foreign policy.

Several times in the past I have written of this idea, which was originally pondered by Harry Truman, although he never initiated any action on it. The proposal is that the secretary of state should continue his function as No. 1 in the cabinet, keeper of the Great Seal and co-ordinator of policy abroad as well as related consultations with Congress.

At the same time, however, it is suggested that there should be a secretary for foreign affairs, of similar full cabinet rank, who would travel overseas for high-level negotiations and international conferences. Recently I asked Jimmy Carter for his opinion of this. He opposed it and thought a strong chief executive could operate effectively with a strong secretary of

However, when I subsequently put the question to Kissinger here he replied: "You can quote me as saying I am sympathetic to the idea." And why not? Kissinger has traveled more than any American official during our two centuries of national history. He has discovered, at the cost of enormous effort and much fatigue, that it is not only difficult to run affairs of "state" while flitting between continents trying to put out fires. Moreover, it is impossible to be in two places at once - even if the secretary were given a な ☆ ☆ ☆ Whether Kissinger is finished with his public career, as most people assume, depends first of all on the elections; for Carter would no more want him as secretary of state in a Democratic administration than Kissinger would covet the job. And if Ford confounds the political soothsayers and remains in the White House, it is improbable the present secretary would re-supersonic Concorde.

Obviously it is most taxing to be on a flying trapeze for eight years, especially while dodging brickbats. No doubt Kissinger would prefer to start another and private career. On the other hand, were a re-elected President Ford to urge that he remain in "the national interest" it would be hard for him to close the door on such a possibility.

One thing is certain; he will stay in office until the January inauguration and would never dream of resigning during the campaign. He managed to keep his cool both when Ford officially censored use of the word "detente" for the last six months (although continuing to pursue that policy) and when the President accepted a Ronald Reagan plank seeking to wound Ford, during the Republican convention, rather than risk losing the nomination.

As far as I can ascertain, foreign policy architects of both parties regard platform planks that deal with this subject as neither binding nor of great consequence. Few major differences concerning U.S. goals appear among currently leading contenders to succeed Kissinger: George Ball, Cyrus Vance and Zbigniew Brezezinski among Democrats; Nelson Rockefeller, John Connally, Elliot Richardson and George Bush among Republicans.

But even if Kissinger returns to private life next year, he must continue the immensely active pace he has set himself until his actual departure. After Nov. 2 certain diplomatic issues, temporarily paralyzed by the election campaign, will revive: Panama Canal negotiations, SALT talks, Middle East explorations, regularization of relations with Peking.

Moreover, the present secretary of state is undertaking more 1976 voyages of discovery. The first is another meeting with South Africa's Prime Minister Vorster in Zurich, then conceivably a subsequent trip to Southern Africa; the second might be a quick flight to Manila to consult Philippines President Marcos, should U.S. base negotiations there run into serious trou-

Thus, whatever happens, Kissinger is likely to remain airborne as well as in the thick of things during the rest of 1976. And, on the whole, his closest associate looks back over the past eight years and sees the period as one of successful diplomacy: Middle East, China, SALT and, despite ups and downs, good present relations with Japanese and West European leaders.

The most glaring failure has been on Greece and Turkey, the entire domain of Aegean affairs. That problem is bound to remain thorny for the next secretary of state — even if by some remote chance, he should happen to be other secretaries of state in a time of troubles. Dean Acheson had been vilified in a shameful way. But throughout his ordeal Acheson had had the support of the Democratic Party and, of course, the unswerving support of his President, Harry Truman.

Yet nevertheless Kissinger indicated that should Ford be elected, he would be willing to stay on for a brief time, perhaps four to six months. His enemies will promptly put this down to his ego. But the secretary has a which he hopes to be able to clear up.

Both in Rhodesia and South Africa, blacks in revolt have put the white minority in increasing jeopardy.

Most important of all is SALT. Kissinger has all along said it would be impossible in an election year to get a SALT II agreement covering offensive nuclear weapons. Yet in October, 1977, the interim standstill agreement on offensive missiles expires and the way is open to an unlimited arms race.

Kissinger is probably more familiar with the intricacies of the SALT negotiations than any other American. He considers the 1977 deadline a fateful turning point. If by that time no agreement has been reached, the hopes for the future are bleak indeed.

President Ford's boast that the world is at peace surely owes not a little to Secretary Kissinger

His negotiation of the Egyptian-Israeli agreement in the Sinai was a remarkable feat of diplomacy calling for perseverance and ingenuity in extraordinary degree. That shuttle diplomacy between Cairo and Jerusalem has seldom been matched.

Add to this his continuing friendship with and belief in Syria's President Hafez Assad. That card, thanks in part to the accident of the grim civil war in Lebanon, has paid off handsomely. The suggestion that the Golan Heights would be open to passage between the two sides would have seemed incredible a short time ago.

The Israelis have initiated a policy of allowing limited numbers of Lebanese to cross the border for medical treatment and the purchase of supplies. Opening up what has been a border sealed by electrified defense and every other security device can mean the beginning of a new era, however tentative, between Israel and her Arab neighbors.

* * * Kissinger is wise enough to know that incidents quite beyond his initiative or control have had a lot to do with the fact of peace. But it is a fact that the party in power takes credit for everything from good crop weather to the eradication of the boll weavil. And whatever the successes or defeats, Kissinger has been the principal architect of American foreign policy since

The continuity of policy in the years ahead is a principal concern of the secretary as he returns from the bruising experience of Kansas City. Can the world stand still until the United States settles its internal differences? That is a question particularly acute to America's allies in Europe. Ties have weakened there and for a variety of reasons all is not peace and harmony with the NATO partners: Speaking at the Bohemian Grove in San Francisco, Kissinger was introduced with such fulsome praise that he responded with typical irony: "After that introduction, there is nothing left for me to do but walk on the

Although he has his downs, the "weltschmertz" of his temperament, he rarely loses his sense of humor. That is his balance wheel in times good and bad. He continues to play a leading part in incidents around the world such as the crisis at the DMZ in Korea when two Americans were wantonly murdered. His days are as occupied as ever, from his 7:30 or 8 o'clock arrival in the morning until his departure at 8 or after in the evening.

Kansas City will not be the last word on his record. That will wait the verdict of history. And he, himself, in his own writing, will have a lot to say about that verdict.

been easy, but Jimmy Carter rates since the Civil War." and George Meany have finally agreed on a strategy for winning the presidential election of 1976; Carter will hold the South, and Meany will use the power of the labor unions of the AFL-CIO to deliver the electoral votes of most of the big industrial states from Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey to Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois.

Even before Labor Day, Carter flew into Washington to pay his respects to Meany and address the General Board of the AFL-CIO in the ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. It was almost but not quite a complete success.

In human terms, it was a fascinating spectacle, dominated by Meany, now 82, very pale and ill, but still full of fight and ironic humor. His doctors, worried about the possibility of contamination in public places, urged him to skip the Carter reception, but he led the charge against Ford and for Carter, and called for unity against the Republicans.

* * * Carter came on and supported Meany and together they defined the Democratic case for victory

They agreed on the old political themes of the past: it was "time for a change." The people had "had enough."

- In the last seven and a half years, there had been a 64% increase in consumer prices -three and a half times the increase of the eight years of the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations.

- Wholesale prices for farm products, food and feed, were up almost 80% in the last seven and a half years - 10 times the increase from 1960-68.

years, the country had gone

"Also, the worst housing slump since World War II, directly caused by high interest

- Also, "a 50% increase in unemployment from the day Ford took office until today.'

There was much more of this, and Carter added to it by condemning the "timid" leadership of the Ford administration, and the lack of trust between the White House and the Congress, and between the American people and their government.

* * * And yet, there was something missing between Carter and the labor union leaders at the Shoreham Hotel. They sat there, halfway between the familiar Meany and the unfamiliar Carter, polite but vaguely puzzled about the Democratic presidential nominee.

Carter came to Washington with a prepared address, but he didn't follow it. He departed from his text and talked about his hard days on the farm, and then returned to his attack on the Ford administration. This aroused his audience, but then he went on and on, and drifted into the old romantic themes of his primary election speeches.

Somehow, Carter held his audience by his obvious sincerity, and the kind of vague yearning for a better world, but he wandered and repeated and almost lost them in the end.

Even so, it is clear that Big Labor which rejected McGovern in 1972 is now solidly behind Carter. Meany emphasized the point in the hour before Carter arrived at the Shoreham.

"We are here," he said, - In these last Nixon-Ford "because we've had enough enough of policies that increase WASHINGTON - It hasn't through "the highest interest unemployment, feed inflation, cause recessions, and create mis-ery and hardship . . . enough of government by veto, by stalemate, by inaction, by deceit and pardon - a government that just drifts along, with no leadership, no firm policy, foreign or domestic . .

* * * Carter followed the same theme, and praised Big Labor as the most effective political machine in America today, and like Meany, he condemned Ford for following the policies of Nixon.

Carter and Meany were together in condemning a Republican president who was forced to resign rather than face impeachment; also a vice president "forced to resign for criminal acts"; a record of unemployment, inflation, widespread bribery, and political chaos.

And mainly Carter and Meany were together on "the economic issue" - prices, unemployment, housing, and interest rates. Carter did emphasize the "work ethic" - jobs rather than welfare, and efficient reorganized government rather than the same old bureaucracy.

But at the same time. Carter insisted that it was going to be a "very hard campaign"; that the people didn't like to vote against a president' and that it was important for labor and everybody else to get the people registered and get out the vote.

Carter was cheered in the end but not all that much. They liked his policy but didn't quite understand his style or manner. Meany supported him all the way, and as usual was as plain as a punch in the nose, but Carter was very subtle, and his audience didn't quite know, even though they were sympathetic with him, how to figure

3 Fatalities Raise Death Toll To 65

By United Press International Three persons died in Nebraska traffic accidents Tuesday, raising the month's record-breaking death toll to 65.

The Accident Records Bureau of the State Roads Department said 65 deaths from Nebraska traffic accidents in August breaks the old record of 61 deaths set in August 1971.

Susan Linnemeyer, 24, of Omaha, died of head injuries suffered when she fell off of a moving car in Omaha, according to Omaha police.

The police said Miss Linnemeyer slid off the hood of a car when it hit a bump on 34th St. Her death will be counted as a traffic fatality, police said.

Also injured in the accident was Kathy Bergman, 22, of Omaha, who received cuts and bruises when she fell off the car. She was treated at University Hospital in Omaha.

Officials said the driver of the car, Cornne Kafka, 23, of Omaha, was booked on suspicion of motor vehicle homicide and possession of marijuana.

The Nance County sheriff's office said a Cedar Rapids man and a Fullerton man were killed in a car-pickup truck collision two miles north of Fullerton.

Killed were Barry G. Biede, 21, of Cedar Rapids, and Paul Wetovick, 44, of Fullerton.

The sheriff's office said Wetovick's pickup truck was northbound and Biede's car was southbound on Hwy. 14 when the vehicles collided on a slight grade of a hill.

Biede was pronounced dead at the scene and Wetovick died en route to a Grand Island hospital, officials said.

Crash Of Cycle, Truck Kills One

Cozad (UPI) - Steven D. Huxsol, 22, of Charles City, Iowa, was killed Wednesday when he lost control of the motorcycle he was riding at a gas station on the south edge of

The Nebrasaska State Patrol said the throttle of the motorcycle apparently stuck, and the motorcycle struck a curb, throwing Huxsol against a parked gas transport truck.

Because of the location of the crash, it was not known whether the fatality would be counted against the state's 1976 highway death toll.

Patrol Promises Extra Emphasis During Holiday

Col. C. P. Karthauser, State Patrol superintendent, Wednesday issued a plea, with a warning clause attached, for citizen support for highway safe ty over the Labor Day weekend.

Karthauser said while he urges motorists to drive carefully, August showed a dramatic increase in the number of persons killed on the highway and his agency intends to do something more than rely on driver judgment.

"The Nebraska State Patrol will place special emphasis on aerial patrol and enforcement during the entire holiday period," he said. "Those who willfully violate traffic laws show little respect for others and should be dealt with accordingly.

During the July 4th weekend, the patrol stopped 876 motorists for traffic violations during a similar enforcement operation. The state recorded three fatalities during that period.

Chadron Fire Chars Timber On 120 Acres

Chadron (AP) - A forest fire reported Wednesday in the Nebraska National Forest was brought under control after blackening about 120 acres of tamber.

instally, U.S. Forest Service officials estimated that the fire had burned about 160 acres of federal land, but later revised their estimates downward, and said about 110 acres of private land was burned, only 10 acres of federal timber.

The fire, which was apparently started by lightning from a thunderstorm Monday night. was discovered Tuesday

High winds hampered the efforts of volunteers from the Job Corps, Chadron residents, State Park crews, the Forest Service and firefighters from the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. The fire was controled by Wednesday afternoon, but officials said several crews would probably remain in the area for several days to mop up and double hot stigits.

Lancaster County railroad crossings just won't be what they used to be if County Engineer Marv Nuernberger has his way. They'll be smoother, better and longer lasting.

Nuernberger is starting out small, with six prefabricated railroad crossings planned for county roads this summer and

The crossings of high impact plastic are now being put into place on three Burlington Northern crossings east of Denton on the Denton road.

And the crossings should hold up "indefinitely," said Nuernberger. This particular brand of prefabricated plastic has been in use for seven years in some areas and "doesn't show any wear."

The crossings are a definite wood (heavy wood) crossings crossings deteriorated with increased car traffic, salt and studded tires, Nuernberger explained.

The crossings are a joint project of the county and railroads. The railroads are doing the installation, which includes new ties and new rails, and the county is furnishing the prefabricated crossing material.
The material costs $100 a track foot and for most county crossings that is about $3,000 per crossing, Nuernberger said.

Other improvements planned this fall include a Burlington Northern crossing on Van Dorn, a crossing on Southwest 98th St. south of Denton and one "somewhere on the Union Pacific," he said.

Eventually Nuernberger hopes to improve 50 county crossings - the majority on paved county improvement over the gum roads - using federal aid

Judges Fault Election Law, Advance McCarthy

Omaha (UPI) — A three-judge federal panel, declaring a portion of Nebraska's election law unconstitutional, Wednesday ordered Secretary of State Allen J Beermann to place the name of L'ugene McCarthy on the state's Nov 2 general election ballot if Beermann can determine if McCarthy has a "satisfactory level of community

U.S. Appeals Judge Donald P. Lay of Omaha and U.S. District Judges Warren K. Urbom, who is hearing the Macbride case alone, refused the state's motion to dismiss it following the three-judge panel hearing on the McCarthy case Urbom gave Asst State Atty Gen Terry Schuaf until Friday to reply to the brief filed by attorneys for Macbride

In their ruling on McCarthy filed in US District Cours in Lincoln Wednesday, the three judges denied the state's motion to dismiss the McCarthy lawsuit for tack of federal jurisdiction

McCarthy, the unsuccessful candidate for the 1968 Democratic presidential nomination, filed the suit, contending there was no provision in Nebraska law for placing an independent candidate for president on the ballot

The three-judge panel said sections of Nebraska law which fail to provide a means by which an independent presidential candidate may obtain certification to appear on the general election ballot were "unconstitutional to that extent

The judges ordered Beermann to honor before Sept 8 "and in good faith" determine from the McCarthy petitions now on file in his office, which allegedly contain 2,981 signatures, whether McCarthy has a "satisfactory level of

Lynch: Forget County Boundaries

By MICHAEL HOLMES Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Omaha - The future of county governments could well depend upon their willingness to forget the boundaries that Separate them

That opinion is expressed "everywhere I go" by Dan Lynch, new president of the National Association of Counties.

"Some services can best be given to people without regard for artificial boundaries," Lynch said. "Counties just have to take the lead in this '

Lynch, also a member and past chairman of the Douglas County Board, said he strongly believes in regionalism — ignoring city, county and state lines when necessary to get vital services to the most people at the least cost.

Launching into his explanation, Lynch laughingly tells the history of the first coun-

"It's the old story. They'd get into a wagon, drive a full day, stop and drive a stake into the ground. That was the county line and they thought it shouldn't be more than a day's drive wide. But those lines aren't really practical any more."

Some officials have begun to agree, Lynch said, noting that Nebraska has been divided into several criminal justice regions for law enforcement, and mental health regions for that service.

A good example, he said, is the Health

Planning Council of the Midlands, an 11county group surrounding metropolitan

With four Nebraska counties and seven Iowa counties involved, the council plans and coordinates health care services for all despite city, county and even state boundaries between the members.

Any effort to regionalize a service "automatically throws out the cities," Lynch said, adding that it's not surprising many city-county consolidations have been "county-dominated mergers."

"What do cities provide, anyway? They pick up the garbage, provide police, firemen and parks. That about does it."

But county governments "are wholesalers of services. They assess the property, collect the taxes, run the elections, provide health care for the poor, oversee the welfare programs and administer state and federal programs.

"If counties didn't exist right now to do that, someone would have to invent them."

Indeed, some experts argue that "the problem isn't with the counties, but with the states," Lynch said. "They say there's no reason why North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Montana couldn't all be one state.

"But in the process of trying to solve our problems, counties just seem to be fair

Despite his strong belief in county government, Lynch still offers suggestions for improvement. Topping that list is the need for a county executive.

"One thing we do need is a full-time county executive, someone to administer the system. "Right now, frankly, how much time a commissioner gives the county board is a matter of conscience. He can spend as little or as much time as he sees fit.

"A lot of us spend more time than others. But, it's hard to make a living and give enough time to this."

Noting that several states, particularly in the East and in California, have begun using county executives, Lynch said he intends to seek legislation to give the half dozen most populous Nebraska counties the same option. And he has a suggestion on how to get that executive.

"Appoint one (county) commissioner to serve as full-time executive, or designate one of the county board seats up for grabs (in elections) as the seat to be both board member and county executive.'

Another possibility, although he doubts it will happen, would be to give larger counties home rule, allowing them to determine their own form of government. "But that would create substate governments and reduce the importance of the Legislature. It's doubtful," he said.

Lynch also said he favors continued election of top county officers. The reason? Accountability to the people.

A READER WRITES: I wonder if you or your readers have experienced this situation? What compels a person, when passing through a town in another state to call upon somebody they barely know from their hometown.

A couple we know went to all kinds of trouble to look us up, even to the extent of going to the county courthouse. The clerk was kind enough to look through old records, but could find no trace of us. We had moved to another town in Indiana.

Yet, when we went to see my mother-in-law in the hospital back home, this woman was on the next floor visiting somebody, and didn't even bother to come see us, or my husband's mother. Another thing, I wouldn't mind so much, if they would spend a dime to see if you are home, and ready for a visit. Most people think it is a big deal to surprise people, but it shocks and angers me. I like to be prepared. I would like to know what you and your readers think on this subject.

COMMENT: You've raised an interesting question. Readers, how do you feel about "drop-in" visits from people you don't

Your point about giving someone a ring before you stop in to see them is well taken. I suppose some people enjoy being surprised, but I'll bet there are a great many readers who share your view

One thing is sure; anyone who drops in unexpectedly must be ready to accept you and your home just as you are. If you're just about to leave for an engagement, that's their tough luck.

A READER WRITES: You wanted to know what retired people do with their time. I can't imagine why some people can't plan. It's like not having a name picked out for a baby that they've known for nine months was coming and would be either a boy or giri!

I have been retired since 1967 and not bored a bit. I read three papers a day, make bandages for Church World Service, walk to town, write letters, take naps and read books and magazines. I take a few trips, but I prefer sticking close to my retirement home apartment. I saw interesting parts of the world while I was working.

I like people but don't feel I time. I go to church but really don't care for shows these days as they are too far away and too expensive COMMENT: Americans finally seem to be getting into preretirement planning. The result will be that retirees will enjoy their post-working years more, just as you suggest. Many people know when they are young that their job will end when they turn 65. Why not take some time to think through how you want to live when that time comes? Then, take steps to cultivate during your working life some of the activities and skills you want to be into or use during your retirement.

I'm glad to see that you include walking in your daily activities. I am hearing and reading more and more about the need for exercise. Persons of every age will feel better and increase their prospects for long life by getting enough regular exercise to keep them in good shape in terms of weight, muscle tone, etc. Overweight is a robber; it decreases our mobility, lessens our sense of wellbeing, and endangers our health. Keep walking.

> A major task facing the Carter campaign is to increase the intensity of his support yet convince his supporters that it is possible that he could lose the election

During the primary season and even at the Democratic convention, Carter was able to engender respect for his can-didacy, but not much deep conviction about him personally or what he stands for. Basically, people admire his rise from an unknown position to that of a frontrunner in so short a time. By and large, the voters reacted more as observers of a fascinating political phenomenon than as committed partisans to the Carter cause.

Ford has not been able to generate high degrees of intensity of support, either. At last reading, a pitifully small 28% favored him "very strongly." However, the Ford vote, drawn far more from the affluent sectors of the electorate than the Carter vote, is more likely to come out on election day. Special Bus 30 Gives Kids Lift Lincoln Public Schools Bus 30 is a special bus. From all appearances it's just another bright yellow bus with black lettering, but that's where the similarity ends.

Bus 30 has a special door on the right side, just behind the regular passenger doors. When driver LaVon Miller opens the door and presses the buttons on a remote control device, a hydraulic ramp unfolds and lowers to the ground.

That makes Mrs. Miller's job, hauling wheelchair-bound students to Park School, a lot easier.

She simply pushes the student and his chair onto the ramp, locks them in place, and lifts them up and into the bus,

According to Lincoln Public Schools transportation foreman Vern Clark, the special attachment has made the job "quick and convenient" for Mrs. Miller and other drivers who may have to drive the route. The hydraulic lift isn't the only thing that makes the 36-passenger bus unique. It also has special tie-downs inside for wheelchairs and the seating arrangement can be re-designed to accommodate as many chairs as necessary.

David Walter, son of the Robert Walters, 4936 Leighton, got a sneak preview of the lift - and a free ride - during a demonstration last week

As he was airborne, David said, "It's okay, I think." With the reassuring help of Mrs. Miller, David and the other students who ride Bus 30 won't have to worry. They'll have a special good time.

euvront Admits Pot Prohibition Has Failed

By GORDON WINTERS Star Staff Writer

The "prohibition" against the use of marijuana apparently has failed, Lancaster County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront said in a court order

"We are all aware that prohibition as to liquor was a miserable failure, and it appears the prohibition policy towards marijuana has also failed to accomplish its purpose," Cheuvront

Despite his assessment of the law's lack of success. Cheuvront refused to declare it invalid on the basis that it is unconstitutional.

Any attempt to change it must be left to the legislative branch of government, he said in a nine-page written order.

Cheuvront's ruling came in response to a motion made last December by attorneys Dennis Keefe and Kirk Naylor. The pair are defending Robert A. Kells, who

One of the grounds on which Naylor and Keefe asked that the suit be declared unconstitutional was that the state law invaded personal privacy.

They cited a decision by the Alaska Supreme Court which overthrew a law forbidding possession of marijuana there.

But Cheuvront said the Alaska decision was based on that state's constitution, which contains an "unqualified guarantee of the right of Keefe and Naylor had also charged the penalties for marijuana possession constituted cruel and unusual punishment and the law violated equal protection of the law since similar penalties are not imposed for possession of alcohol and tobacco.

In commenting on the punishment issue, Cheuvront said the Nebraska law imposes relatively light criminal sanctions which do not impose a "disproportionate burden."

And although state law treats tobacco and alcohol differently from marijuana, Cheuvront said, it does not constitute the "invidious discrimination" necessary for the marijuana law to be declared unconstitutional.

Washington (UPI) - The Pen-

Oklahoma State University and Colorado State University have both been forced to drop programs which provide "slots" in those states' veterinary schools for Nebraskans.

There have been between 17 and 20 positions open for Nebraskans each year under University of Nebraska contracts with schools in six different states, according to Prof. Marvin Twiehaus of the UNL Veterinary Science Department.

Now there will be three or four fewer positions in contracts with only four schools: Kansas State, Iowa State, the University of Minnesota and the University of Missouri. The Board of Regents will discuss the problem at its Sept. 8 meeting.

The contracts allow Nebraska veterinary students to attend those schools while paying resident tutition.

The State of Nebraska, in turn, pays each school between $6,000 and $10,000 per student to cover costs. The legislatures in both Oklahoma and Colorado made the rulings, Twiehaus said, because they want to insure the maximum number of positions for students from their own states.

Competition to enter veterinary school is very keen. For the 17 "slots" available to Nebraskans last year, there were 80 applicants, Twiehaus said.

If this is the start of a trend, it could mean Nebraskans applying to veterinary schools in the future may find all doors shut in their faces.

There is little hope of Nebraska making any new contracts with other schools, Twiehaus said.

"All schools are under pressure to train more veterinarians from their own states," Dr. Richard Fleming, UNL information director, told The Star.

It would cost from $20 million to $50 million to establish a school in Nebraska, plus the annual cost per student to operate it, Fleming estimated.

An alternative is to establish a regional school, as is being considered by the Old West Regional Commission, comprising Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming. Twiehaus, formerly Nebraska's Exon will meet with the governors of the other commission states in Great Falls, Mont., on Oct. 8, to discuss the proposal further.

The final decision on an Old West regional veterainary school is up to the five state legislatures.

Part of Colorado's reason for refusing Nebraska students is that Colorado's veterinary school has itself become a regional school, also serving New Mexico and Arizona.

Wyoming and Montana legislators are looking to the possibility of joining Colorado's region, Twiehaus said.

Even if those states decide against the Old West scheme, the Dakotas and Nebraska could form a three-state region to support a school, Twiehaus

Channel Increase Sparks Bargains In CB Radios

By JANE BRYANT QUINN New York - It's a great time for finding bargains in citizens band radios. Starting January 1, the government will expand the band from 23 channels to 40, which makes today's models technologically obsolete. But just as old Victrolas can still play a sweet song, those old radios will send and receive as well as they ever did. And sellers are dumping them on the market at a market there. big discounts.

those radios that lack "phase loop locks." That's the circuitry needed for converting a 23channel model to one capable of working over a 40-channel band.

If you live in an area with a lot of CB interference, you may want all 40 channels - so before buying a discount model, ask if it's convertible, and for how much. Estimated conversion prices now run anywhere from $25 to $80, although after the first of the year those prices could change. (It might also turn out that some models don't convert nearly as well as the seller promised.)

If you want to wait and buy a new set, don't expect it to come cheap. Manufacturers are now predicting that 40-channel radios will be 25 to 50% higher than present models.

Price hikes like that make million. today's CB bargains look even more attractive. In less crowded areas of the country, 23 channels probably will be enough - especially in the west, the south, and rural areas where spaces are wide and CB users few. In fact,

Even in the crowded cities, 23-The biggest bargains are in channel sets are far from obsolete. With conversations soon to be spread over 40 channels, interference on the original 23 will be much less.

It's in those crowded cities that the best CB bargains are now to be found. Among the places where use is the heaviest and interference the greatest are Washington D.C., Dallas, Miami and the West Coast, distributors told my associate Anne Colamosca,

Sales of CB radios have fallen off sharply in the past few months, adding to the pressure on stores to cut prices. A lot of buyers are clearly waiting for new sets to arrive. Also, the market may be saturated, for a while at least. When I last reported on CB radios, nearly a year ago, there were 2 million licensed users; now there are 6

Even my favorite economist has taken to broadcasting Smokey (police) reports, under the name, Crystal Ball. Those broadcasts are illegal, of course, but with the CB craze running high, they're rapidly overtaking

They'd Do It Again

Chicago (UPI) - Despite increasing frustrations, seven out: of 10 physicians would choose medicine as a career if they had it to do over again, according to the latest poll in the Impact section of American Medical News, the American Medical Association's newspaper for 576,500 Americans, the Italia physicians. Two out of 10 doctors, however, would not select director of tourism in the United medicine as a career a second time, and one out of 10 isn't sure whether he would or not, the poll found.

paperclip theft as the most prevalent form of white collar crime.

Now that more channels are becoming available, the Federal Communications Commission broadcasts this message: please lay off channels 8 and 10, which lie aside the emergency channel, 9. In crowded areas, there's so much interference on 9 that emergency reports can't always get through.

CB users still hope that eventually the FCC will assign them a higher quality frequency band, but that's at least three to five years away. If it comes, it will likely be in addition to the existing band, so your old 23channel set should be useful for a long time to come. When the new channels come into use in January, there doubtlessly will be a number of special deals around for people wanting to trade up to a better set. Companies are kicking around trade-in and exchange plans to cut the cost of switching to new equipment. In addition to the 40 channels, you also will find some new gizmos. For example, a selective calling button to buzz someone you want to talk to; and hidden installation, so thieves won't know there's a CB radio in your

A warning: Amid all the lowprice offers, don't mistake 'pocket" CB radios for the real thing. They haven't the range or the receiving ability to plug you in on America's new community of the air.

Farm Futures Sharply Higher

CHICAGO (AP) - Farm commodity futures, with large commercial support and short covering, moved sharply higher on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

Sovbean futures closed with a gain of 16 cents a bushel while soy oil advanced to the allow able limit of 100 points, or 1 cen a pound. Soybean meal rose $3 a ton. Corn closed with a gain of nearly 6 cents a bushel, while wheat and oats were up 4 cents. Iced broilers advanced more than 1/4 cent a pound but trade was rather thin.

Some trade sources thought the overnight and daytime rains that fell over portions of the Middle West were not quite as heavy as had been forecast. Other trade sources noted a limit advance in silver futures and theorized that soybeans were bought because of this. Another bullish factor was a trade belief that Brazil had overestimated, and as a result overexported, the soybean crop this year as well as products. This could make United States soybeans and

Monte Anthony First Fall Scrimmage

Anthony Relieved After Drill: I Made It

By DAVE SITTLER Monte Anthony looked like a prisoner whose death sentence had just been pardoned by the governor.

As he sat in front of his locker following Wednesday's scrimmage, Anthony couldn't hide the relief that was building quickly in-

"Today was make it or break it day for me, and I made," Anthony said as a big grin crossed his face. "No one knew what was going to happen. Not the doctors, not me, no one. But I passed the test."

For the first time since the opening of fall drills last month. Monte Anthony was testing his broken wrist in live contact. Every Big Red fan from Omaha to Scottsbiuff will jump for joy to hear Nebraska's superb I-back passed his test with flying colors.

Until Wednesday, Anthony had been wearing some sort of cast on his right wrist ever since he broke it in last May's spring

The plastic cast he had been wearing during fall camp had hindered him from just to running drills against no opponent. But Nebraska's opening game against LSU in Baton Rouge is a mere 10 days away. It was time to see if Anthony was going to be able to play. "I was nervous before we started" Anthony said. "But there were no problems. Matter of fact I really enjoyed it. It's given me more confidence than I've had in a long time."

Running with the top offensive unit against the No. 3 defense, Anthony cracked for five yards the first time he touched the

"It felt strange to touch the ball with my cast off," he said. "I was able to move my wrist.

The next time he touched the ball he ripped off a 15-yard gain to the fiveyardline. On the next play, Anthony cracked over the left side for a touchdown. With the offense then working on goalline situations from the five, Anthony again scored as he bowled over tacklers. "I told Coach (Tom) Osborne that once I got the adrenaline flowing I wouldn't feel anything," said the man who led Nebraska in rushing his freshman and sophomore seasons.

Anthony has been stewing and worrying since last May, when it took three doctors to put the wrist back in place and the first of five different style casts were placed on the shattered limb.

"If those doctors wouldn't have been able to pull it back into place they would have had to put a pin in my arm," Anthony said. "Thank goodness they got back in place. While he spent the summer going through a variety of casts that started with an arm length job to the top of his shoulder. Anthony learned how to use his left hand. "I'm ambidextrous now," said the junior

Although he has been hampered by the injury. Anthony has run alone with the first unit during drills because the other first team I-back, Dave Gillespie, has been nursing a hamstring injury.

Anthony said the extra work with the first team has left him with the feeling that he has "learned more about the position this fall than ever before.

"In the past there has been two I-backs always sharing time. I think the extra time I've spent with the first team has left me in good shape if I have to go most of the way against LSU."

Noting that he was pleased with Anthony's showing in the controlled scrimmage. Osborne said Gillespie's availability for the LSU game probably won't be known until next week.

Wingback Curtis Craig spent Wednesday working at the I-back slot. It appears likely that Craig will remain there if Gillespie does not improve. We'll run Curtis back there for the next

- Jimmy Connors powered his way to victory, Ilie Nastase won by default and 19-year-old Billiv Martin turned in the day's biggest upset Wednesday as the U.S. Open Tennis Championships got underway at the West Side Tennis Club.

Manuel Orantes of Spain, the defending champion, also won, beating Japanese Davis Cupper Jun Kuki, 7-5, 6-1. Orantes, apparently not bothered by an ailing left arm, held service throughout the first set and won by breaking Kuki in the 12th and fina! game.

Kuki lost the final two points when he slammed one backhand into the net, then hit another one out.

Orantes had no problem in the second set, breaking Kuki in the fourth and sixth game.

Nastase, scheduled to play New Zealand's Onny Parun in the second half of the evening doubleheader, was leading 40-30 in the first game of the first set when Parun-apparently suffering from a back strain-quit.

Nastase entertained the crowd for a few minutes by slamming balls at a trio of ball boys on the other side of the net, but then the evening's program was called off.

Switzer, QB Blevins Discuss New Sooners

By BOB OWENS Star Sports Editor

Norman, Okla. - Barry Switzer talked about injuries, inexperience and youth on his Oklahoma football team Wednesday when Big Eight Conference Skywriters visited

Quarterback Dean Blevins talked abut the speed in the offensive backfield, some of the new things the Sooners will do on offense and the new "no petting" atmosphere the coaches created starting last spring.

Coaches naturally worry more about new players and the old ones who aren't eligible any more than the players do.

"Coaches like to play juniors and seniors," Switzer admitted. "We'll have to make up for inexperience with mental and physical dedication," he said.

Oklahoma, which will be trying for its third national championship in a row, lost a lot of very good players in offensive aces quarterback Steve Davis, split ends Tinker Owens and Billy Brooks, halfback Joe Washington and defensive stars down linemen Dewey and Leroy Selmon, and end Jimbo Elrod.

"I have a mental picture of what we have been in the past." Switzer said. "We've been a pretty good football team, but we now don'thave what we have Switzer, 32-1-1 in his three previous seasons at Oklahoma, says the past might give the Sooners an edge for this season - the momentum from the last three years. We are inexperienced, but we have young talent with the ability to make a lot of things runs a 4.5 and I do 4.5 once in a happen," he said. "In time we'll become a good football team."

Switzer pleased with the defense than he thought he would be. "Reggie Murray (left tackle) and Phil Tabor (right tackle) have played well this fall." They are the replacements for the Selmons.

ly for the center position because we don't have a player there with any experience. Switzer said. Curtis is being challenged for the job by sophomores Jody Farthing and Paul Tabor. Blevins, a Norman resident for 13 years before enrolling at OU. likes the Sooners' offensive backfield and calls the OU defensive secondary "the haardest hitting secondary I've ever seen." The backfield has great speed and potential. Blevins noted that fullback Kenny King, a sophomore, has run the 40-yard sistently runs it in 4.6. "Elvis Peacock (left halfback) does it in 4.5 and had a 9-4 in the 100 in high school," Blevins said. "Horace Ivory (right halfback) while and consistently 4.6. We're two and three deep where we

Culbreath, who had a good second half against Michigan in the Orange Bowl, and George Cumby, who had shoulder surgery after an injury in the opener against Oregon last season and missed the rest of the season.

Oklahoma may look like it is running the same wishbone offense to the fans in the stands this season, but it's going to be different for teams to defense. "We had the same play book for five years with Steve Davis."

Blevins said. "Teams knew what we were going to do, but we had the personnel to blow them out. Defenses started catching up and we added some 'reads' last vear," he added. Reads are, for example, the quarterback watching a tackle and deciding what to do with the ball after the tackle commits himself. He said Oklahoma used 'reads' the entire second half of the Michigan "We're 100 per cent 'read' now." Blevins said. That is considered a true wishbone, which is the offense Bud Moore brought to Kansas from Alabama. "We're splitting people out and doing a lot of different things.

Defensively, Oklahoma also will change, not in the basic formation, but Switzer said, "We'll be more active on defense, stunt more and be more "unpredictable. Blevins mentioned another thing that has changed. The Sooners no longer are "petted." By that he meant, there are no players given special treatment. such as being held out of con-

Switzer, QB Blevins Discuss New Sooners

By BOB OWENS Star Sports Editor

Norman, Okla. - Barry Switzer talked about injuries, inexperience and youth on his Oklahoma football team Wednesday when Big Eight Conference Skywriters visited here.

Quarterback Dean Blevins talked abut the speed in the offensive backfield, some of the new things the Sooners will do on offense and the new "no petting" atmosphere the coaches created starting last spring.

Coaches naturally worry more about new players and the old ones who aren't eligible any more than the players do.

"Coaches like to play juniors and seniors," Switzer admitted. "We'll have to make up for inexperience with mental and physical dedication," he said.

Oklahoma, which will be trying for its third national championship in a row, lost a lot of very good players in offensive aces quarterback Steve Davis, split ends Tinker Owens and Billy Brooks, halfback Joe Washington and defensive stars down linemen Dewey and Leroy Selmon, and end Jimbo Elrod. "I have a mental picture of what we have been in the past," Switzer said. "We've been a pretty good football team, but we now don'thave what we have Switzer, 32-1-1 in his three previous seasons at Oklahoma, says the past might give the Sooners an edge for this season - the momentum from the last three years. "We are inexperienced, but we have young talent with the ability to make a lot of things happen," he said. "In time we'll become a good football team.

Switzer said he is more have a lot of speed. pleased with the defense than he thought he would be. "Reggie Murray (left tackle) and Phil Tabor (right tackle) have played well this fall." They are the replacements for the Selmons.

The No. 1 center right now is Joe Curtis, a teammate at Ventura Junior College of Nebraska tight end Mark Dufresne. Curtis finished the spring on the second unit behind Karl Baldischwiler, who now is running No. 2 at left tackle

'We recruited Curtis especially for the center position because we don't have a player there with any experience, Switzer said. Curtis is being challenged for the job by sophomores Jody Farthing and Paul Tabor. Blevins, a Norman resident for

13 years before enrolling at OU. likes the Sooners' offensive backfield and calls the OU defensive secondary "the haardest hitting secondary I've ever seen."

The backfield has great speed and potential. Blevins noted that fullback Kenny King, a sophomore, has run the 40-yard dash in 4.5 seconds and consistently runs it in 4.6. "Elvis Peacock (left halfback) does it in 4.5 and had a 9-4 in the 100 in high school," Blevins said. "Horace Ivory (right halfback) runs a 4.5 and I do 4.5 once in a while and consistently 4.6. We're

Switzer admitted to threedeep strength in fine players at

Culbreath, who had a good second half against Michigan in the Orange Bowl, and George Cumby, who had shoulder surgery after an injury in the opener against Oregon last season and missed the rest of the season.

Oklahoma may look like it is running the same wishbone offense to the fans in the stands this season, but it's going to be different for teams to defense.

"We had the same play book for five years with Steve Davis," Blevins said. "Teams knew what we were going to do, but we had the personnel to blow them out.

"Defenses started catching up and we added some 'reads' last year," he added. Reads are, for example, the quarterback watching a tackle and deciding what to do with the ball after the tackle commits himself. He said Oklahoma used 'reads' the entire second half of the Michigan

'We're 100 per cent 'read' now," Blevins said. That is considered a true wishbone, which is the offense Bud Moore brought to Kansas from Alabama. "We're splitting people out and doing a lot of different things.'

Defensively, Oklahoma also will change, not in the basic formation, but Switzer said, "We'll be more active on defense, stunt more and be more "unpredictable.

Blevins mentioned another thing that has changed. The Sooners no longer are "petted."

By that he meant, there are no players given special treatment, such as being held out of contact, which the stars of recent teams have been allowed to do. Kinlaw (nose guard), Richard fullback. Behind King are Jim Oklahoma Roundup, Page 24

NFL Sets 43-Man Limit

NEW YORK (AP) - National Football League teams, with the exception of Seattle and Tampa Bay, will be limited to 43 players this season, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Wednesday night.

The two expansion teams—the Seattle Seahawks and Tam-Bay Buccaneers-will be allowed to carry six additional players for the first two games, then 45 after that. However, the teams may only dress 43 players for any game.

Rozelle said the teams must reach their player limit by Monday, Sept. 6, at 2 p.m., EDT.
In other action taken at an all-day meeting here, he NFL owners extended the inter-conference trading deadline to 4 p.m., EDT, Wednesday, Sept. 8.

Links Set To Host Gl

By RANDY YORK

Prep Sports Editor First-year Lincoln High football coach Larry Frost doesn't know what to expect Thursday night when his Links kick off the prep football season with a Trans-Nebraska Conference game against Grand Island at acrest Field.

"It should be interesting and hopefully exciting," Frost said.
"I know one thing. You'll see a different Lincoln High than you've seen down through the

"We may be called a lot of things by the end of the year," he added, "but we won't be called conservative."

So far, Frost's biggest concern is maintaining an "I believe" attitude in the Lincoln High camp. "My impression has been that our kids would like to believe they're going to be better than it," he said.

Grand Island coach Ken Fischer is a believer in at least one Lincoln High athlete. "Iboroh Umoren went to Walnut Jr. High here up to ninth grade," Fischer said of the Links' 5-4, 157-pound starting fullback. "He was one of the best we had. I think he ran a :10.5 in the 100 as an eighth-Iboroh didn't get a chance to follow in his brother Sunday's footsteps at Grand Island.

"Sunday was a real plus for us," Fischer notes. "Three or four years ago, he kicked a 32yard field goal which beat Southeast in the final seconds." Although Grand Island, No. 5 in the Sunday Journal and Star's pre-season Class A ratings, is a solid favorite against the Links, last year, but they're still a little afraid to let themselves believe granted. 'We know they'll be fired up for us," he said. "We had a tough time with Lincoln High last year. We won, 20-0, but it was 6-0 going into the fourth quarter. Lincoln High has always been one of our most physical Fischer doesn't expect his senior-dominated team to look by any opponent. "They'll play he predicted. "They've been having good battles for positions all fall. It's been the best since I've been here.'

The Lincoln High-Grand Island football series is one of Nebraska's oldest prep rivalries. It started in 1916. The Links shut out the Islanders the first seven times the two teams met.

Lincoln High has gone on to record 18 more shutouts to lead the series, 34-19, with four ties.

Iboroh Umoren To Start At Fullback

Fischer has mastered Lincoln High three times in four years, the only setback being a 28-22 decision in 1974.

The Links will run out of the veer offense. "It'll take us awhile to get used to," Frost admitted. "We didn't feel we had enough up front to be the type of team to drive the ball. There'll be some errors, but we hope there's a lot of big plays, too.

Davenport Gets Revenge

(AP) - Willie Davenport of the United States took revenge on Olympic champion Guy Drut of France in the 110-meter hurdles but American sprint ace Steve Williams was upset in both dashes Wednesday night at an all-star track and field meet.

Davenport, the bronze medalist at Montreal, inched ahead with three hurdles to go and won the event with a time of 13.48 seconds over his French rival who was clocked in 13.64.

Williams, making his only European appearance after an injury kept him out of the Montreal games, was overtaken by West Germans just short of the finish in both 100 and 200 meter dashes and had to settle for second places in both events.

Dieter Steinmann won the 100meter event in 10.57 secs., one one-hundredth of a second faster than the 23-year-old American. Karl-Heinz Weissenseel was back to win the 200-meter race in 20.84, with Williams runner-up in 20.87.

Both coaches hope their experiences under Fischer pave the way for similar success in their new situations. As Grand Island aides, they played major

"We had our little differences of opinion about what we wanted to do," Thorell recalled. "Sometimes, we'd walk out of meetings mad, but we'd always know the way things were going to be done. Ken was a heckuva man to work under."

Carothers pointed out "no two coaches are 100% alike. Ken is an expert organizer. He had a detailed plan. He always listened to his assistants, but the final decision rested with him. He's the most intense person I've ever been around. He developed a wonderful system to work in.'

As football and track coach and athletic director, Carothers is trying to develop the same type of system at Waverly.

Fischer is happy about his two former assistants having positive experiences. "I think it's good that assistants toss things around, talk and argue a little bit,"

Grand Island v. Lincoln High, Thursday night, Seacrest Field - The Links have proven backfield speed, but a huge question mark hovers over the line. Grand Island is a two touchdown favorite, 21-7.

Lincoln Southeast v. Lincoln Northeast, Friday night, Seacrest Field - About 10.-000 fans are expected to see what could be a rare offensive showdown between two city schools. Since the Rockets are rated higher in the pre-season, a prep writer shouldn't shift gears before a game has been played. Prediction: Northeast 21, Southeast 20.

Water Needs Arise

Last weekend, the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission indicated it is researching the potential of giving fish and wildlife some value when water considerations are being made. With the dying streams and dry riverbeds, it seems like a fair thing to do.

Norm Stuckey, one of the researchers, points out there are more and better reasons for placing a value on our fish and wildlife resources where water is concerned than just saving the fish and wildlife for recreation. Stuckey calls the fish and wildlife an "indicator" of problem areas for we humans. When all is considered, that is a just argument right there. Fish and wildlife tell us when water or air is polluted (by their dying). They tell us in many ways when we're putting too much chemicals on our lands (i.e. bald eagle troubles in It wasn't more than a month ago that birds, fish and mammals perhaps saved thousands of lives in the Mideast when unsuspecting gases invaded a region. The people knew something was wrong when the birds and animals started dying. Books have been written about the fact that the birds, animals and fish do indeed tell us when something is wrong. Why wouldn't it be a similar case with the lack of water? Didn't a number of rural households, even small towns, run out of water at a time when fish and wildlife were experiencing drought conditions of their own with loss of stream or river water? Couldn't that have told us we were using too much?

Necessary Waters

Water is a necessary part of living, all living. With dry years, water is important to our agribusiness and that's what supports most of our living in the Midwest. Irrigation has probably saved much of what could have been economically disasterous dry years for farming in our state.

But while irrigation is a more important part in modern farming, it shouldn't be the cause of water troubles. Drawing the water out of rivers, streams and the ground should be controlled to permit domestic use of some water. And why not use of some of that same water for our fish and wildlife?

Maybe we could point out taking one's blood pressure or testing one's blood doesn't have any value, either - until you consider the test tells you if you aren't in top condition or worse. Then

Our fish and wildlife are valuable, if not for recreation, then for their value as our barometers on the ecology. They don't hesitate to tell us when it's sick.

Canoe Country Notes Canoeing in Nebraska and Nebraska canoists are drawing national attention this month.

Cornhusker Canoe Country," by Mike McGhee is one of the featured articles in this month's issue of Canoe Magazine. McGhee describes canoeing on Nebraska's Platte, Niobrara, Missouri, Republican and Dismal Rivers. He details location, water conditions, scenery and fishing to be found on each of Nebraska's favorite canoe waters. Meanwhile, Nebraska canoers are prime contenders in the Governor's Cup Challenge Canoe Race in Wyoming. Two Lincolnites, Dave Hutchinson, tearning with Ogallala's Dennis Kailey, and Vern Mares, teamming with Todd Halle of Seward, are among three Nebraska two-man teams. The other entrants are Grand Island's George Hassell and Wayne Bockman. The canoers will take part in the 14-mile race along the Snake River in Teton County. In addition to the Governor's Cup, to be held over the Labor Day weekend, the Nebraskans will compete in the National Whitewater Class on Sept. 5. Nebraska finished fifth overall last year.

Water is a necessary part of living, all living. With dry years, water is important to our agribusiness and that's what supports most of our living in the Midwest. Irrigation has probably saved much of what could have been economically disasterous dry years for farming in our state.

But while irrigation is a more important part in modern farming, it shouldn't be the cause of water troubles. Drawing the water out of rivers, streams and the ground should be controlled to permit domestic use of some water. And why not use of some of that same water for our fish and wildlife? Maybe we could point out taking one's blood pressure or testing one's blood doesn't have any value, either — until you consider the test tells you if you aren't in top condition or worse. Then

Our fish and wildlife are valuable, if not for recreation, then for their value as our barometers on the ecology. They don't hesitate to tell us when it's sick.

Canoe Country Notes

Canoeing in Nebraska and Nebraska canoists are drawing national attention this month.

'Cornhusker Canoe Country," by Mike McGhee is one of the featured articles in this month's issue of Canoe Magazine. McGhee describes canoeing on Nebraska's Platte, Niobrara, Missouri, Republican and Dismal Rivers. He details location, water conditions, scenery and fishing to be found on each of Nebraska's favorite canoe waters.

Meanwhile, Nebraska canoers are prime contenders in the Governor's Cup Challenge Canoe Race in Wyoming. Two Lincolnites, Dave Hutchinson, teaming with Ogallala's Dennis Kailey. and Vern Mares, teamming with Todd Halle of Seward, are among three Nebraska two-man teams. The other entrants are Grand Island's George Hassell and Wayne Bockman.

The canoers will take part in the 14-mile race along the Snake River in Teton County. In addition to the Governor's Cup, to be held over the Labor Day weekend, the Nebraskans will compete in the National Whitewater Class on Sept. 5. Nebraska finished fifth overall last year.

Begonia Hits Him For Loss

FAYETTEVILLE, (UPI) - Arkansas running back Jerry Eckwood, one of the most prolific ground gainers in the Southwest Conference last season until a knee injury sidelined him, Wednesday pleaded innocent to a misdemeanor charge of stealing a potted plant.

A trial was set by municipal judge Richard Wells for Nov.

Eckwood was charged Tuesday with "theft by receiving" in connection with a begonia plant stolen from the front porch of an area home. He was released from the city jail under $509 bond posted by Lon Farrell, assistant athletic director at the University of Arkansas. The theft by receiving charge comes under the new state Criminal Code, replacing the previous statute for possession of stolen property. Eckwood has declined to comment about the incident.

Arkansas Coach Frank Broyles said the only action the university might take would involve Eckwood's violation of the 11 p.m. curfew.

selling car. We have a large stock of 77's on hand. They're just the beginning of what we expect for the 1977 season. We don't intend to get caught short this year after selling so many 1976 Oldsmobiles. Because of the large number of automobiles we sold last year. Oldsmobile has authorized us to start selling the 77's NOW. This gives Lincolnites a special opportunity to see the new cars early and a chance to enjoy the Labor Day weekend in a 1977 Cutlass
